

The "Do Not Call" law should be more stringent NOT less. No one should have the right to market their business using my telephone equipment, paid for by me. These business hawks are now starting to call cell phones and that is extremely expensive (except for the phone companies, of course). If you folks refuse to protect the consumer, which is expected in these times, my solution will be to install a switch, which will block all numbers unless they display their callback number or unless they have a special code issued by me.
